

VIDEO: STEWARDING EVERY SEASON

Discussion Questions:

- What is our common calling?
- How would you describe the season of life you are in right now?
- How have you been tempted to over identify with a particular role or responsibility? What happens when you give your energy to something you have over identified with?
- How can understanding my season of life clarify my work and how I am to deploy my energy?
- How does my individuality shape me and clarify the unique contribution I have to make?
- Are you more tempted to expand or shrink your circle of responsibility?
- How would you describe the relationship between your energy and responsibility? What changes do you need to make to faithfully steward your energy so that you are deployed and not depleted?
- What do we mean when we use the term “work”?
- What experiences and characteristics make up your individuality?
- What is the difference between concern and responsibility?
- What roles are unique to you in this season?
- Who/what are you responsible for in this season?
- What happens when we over identify with a concern?
- How can excess energy become corrupted?
- Why is community important in helping us discern what is a concern vs. a responsibility?
- What next steps might you need to take to steward your current season of life well?